

The Center

Robert C. Powers

---

October 21, 2010
Voter's Dilemma

This time of year, voters are presented with a confusing array of candidates, attack advertisements and talking heads. Let me share my thoughts on this with you.

The only important thing about the candidate is whether or not he/she is honest and reasonably intelligent. Even that fades, because the political process in Washington requires them to not be either one if they want to be re-elected. Candidates start with intentions toward integrity, but when faced with the reality of the process, this fades in most—not all.

WHAT IS IMPORTANT is which PARTY THEY REPRESENT!

Because, after all the shouting is over, they will, for the most part, vote the PARTY LINE. That's where their bread is buttered. This is, as evidenced by recent voting patterns, more true of Democrats than Republicans.

So, if you want the government to pay for everything, and you like a welfare state with big government and a lot of ensnaring regulation, you should vote Democrat. If you believe the United States should be part of a "world community", share wealth with lesser nations, and in general have a weak foreign policy and a weakened military, vote Democrat. If you believe that our borders should be open to illegal immigrants, vote Democrat. If you believe in spending more money than we have and borrowing to make up the difference, vote Democrat. If you believe in Government run health care rather than individual run health care, vote Democrat. If you believe that America should move toward socialism, vote Democrat. If you believe the government should create jobs for us, vote Democrat. If you believe in high taxes, vote Democrat.

If you don't believe in a welfare state with big government and a lot of ensnaring regulation, vote Republican. If you believe the United States should be a strong nation and a leader in the "world community", and have a strong foreign policy and military, vote Republican. If you believe that our borders should be controlled, vote Republican. If you believe in spending conservatively, vote Republican. If you believe in health care you can purchase from the private sector, vote Republican. If you believe that America should NEVER move toward socialism, but should maintain a strong capitalist economy where we create our own jobs, vote Republican. If you believe in fair taxes, vote Republican.

It's that simple! And, if you vote Democrat, live for today because tomorrow is filled with debt and danger. No kidding!